V SOLDIERS COMING HOME.

They are coming horde, coming house Brother and lover, father and son, Friend and for-they are coming home To rest, for their work is done.

They come from hospital, picket and field, From Iron boat, and frowning fort In silent companies, slowly wheeled In the rhythm of a solemn thought.

This was a father of women and men. Gray-haired, but hale, and strong of limb: The bayonet flashed, and flashed again, And the old man's eyes grew dim!

Here was a form of manty grace: The bomb-shell growing through the air, Dronched with his blood a pictured face, And a curl of silken balr.

This was a bright-eyed, venturesome boy; Buck from the perilous picket ground They bore him, waked from his dream of joy To a glastly, falst would.

And thus for three days lingering, He talked in wandering, rapid speech. Of mother, and home, and the cooling spring His lips could almost reach.

They are coming home, but not as they went. With the flying flag and stirring band, With the fender word, and message scut From the distant, waving hand.

Up the steps and into the door. With hidden faces our loved ones comes: We may cry their name out o'er and o'er, But their pallid lips are dumb.

O friends, untimely smatched from hence, Mny we flud, beyond heaven's lowering dome Rome blissful future recommense For this surrowful coming home!

She will bear pain and toil, and anxiety; for her husband's love is to her as a tower and fortress—Shielded and sheltered therein, adver sity will have lost its sting. She may suffer, but sympathy may dull the edge of her sorrow. A house with love in it—and by love, I mean love expressed in words, and looks, and deeds, for I have not one spark of faith in the love that never crops out—is to a house without love, I mean love expressed in words.—It is to be remarked that meeting the long of their free long that never crops out—is to a house without love, that never crops out—is to a house without love, the long of the long of the long of their long of the long of the long of their long of the long as a person to a machine; the one is life, the came quick and vehement, frequently almost beother mechanisms

PARALELS OF HISTORY.

When the wooden horse ascended the breach? the walls of Troy, one man, a priest, seemed the treason. He suspected it was a ruse of the enemy, and seizing a spear, he harled it with all bis might at the enormous bulk, which the fated people themselves were hoisting with ropes and pulleys into the sacred citadel. When the spear, driven by a zealous arm, struck the hope side of driven by a zealous arm, struck the large side of a mustre, the clarge of arms resounded within. The Grecians, pent up inside, apprehensive that they were betrayed, were thrown into momentary confusion. But the definited people were horrified at what they deemed the sacribences of the production of gious act. The panderous engine entered its CHESNITS, fresh, at destine I sent. Laocoon, who had hurled the spear, was attacked by two immense scrients, which as he was sacrificing on the seashere, which strongled them—a group immortal in the history of sculpture.

GOING WITH THE GRES.

The entrance into society may be said to take place introduction after buyboal had passed WHOLESALE STORE away, yet a multimale take their initiative be-fore their beards are presentable. It is a great trial either for a tender or a riper age. For an overgrown boy to go to a door, knowing well that there are a dozen girls inside, and knock or ring, with an absolute containty that in a few moments all eyes will be upon him is a severe test of courage. To go before these girls and make a tour of the room without stepping on their toes; and sit down and dispose of his hands without patting them in his pockets, is an achievement which few boys can boast. If a boy can measure off ten yards of tape with one of the girls, and cut it off each end, he may stund a chance to pass a pleasant evening. Let him not flatter himself that the trints of the evening are over. There comes a breaking up. The dear girls don their hoods and put on their shawls and looked so sauey and mischievous, so unim-pressible and independent, as if they didn't wish anybody to go home with them. Then comes the pinels, and the boy who has the most plack goes up to the prefficst girl in the room, with his oughs elinging to the roof of his mouth, and crooking out his elbow, stammers out the words, "Shall I see you home?" She touches her fuger to his arm, and they walk home feeling awk-ward as two goslings. As soon as she is at her own door, he struts home, and really thinks he hes been and gone and done it. Sleep comes on him at last, with dreams of Harriet and calico and he wakes in the morning and finds the door of life open upon him, and the pigs squeating for PERSONAL APPÉARANCE OF EDMUND BURKE.

When Burke came forward, as his custom was, to the middle of the House of Commons to speak, the first peculiarity which caught the eye of the spectator was the glasses which he Only let a woman be sure that she is precious to her husband—not useful, not valuable, not convenient, simply, but lovely and beloved; let her be the recipient of his politic and beautiful to the beautiful to t almost constantly were in the days of his celebriobserver. The head was solid and intense rathor than massive, high rather than broad, and tolerably prominent, feller, one would say at first sight, of the reasoning than of the imagining power. His mose, which was as strait as if it had been out after a bevel, opened out two powerful nostrels, made apparently only to succr. Altogether he looked like a great lesson to read to men, more than like a gentle one set in the world to please. He spoke with a decided Hibernian accent, although he left the country yond the power of utterance. As he spoke, his head rose and fell; now itswang, and anon it The autored woman may have bread just as light, a house just as tidy as the other, but the last a spring of beauty about her, a joyous mess, an aggressive, and penetrating, and pervaling brightness, to which the former is a constant of the most characteristic of these representations. Are European nations at liberty to contend with rebellion in their own | re for the culture of exotics. territories, and put it down if they can! Are they at liberty to contest such a question for two years, should one year prove too short to settle it; In this case of Russia against Circassla the contest has lasted ten or twelvé years already. If interference is the duty of such guardians of the world's peace as England and France have assumed themselves to be, they should at once begin with this old matter of Russin and Circassia, and having settled that, by the lumiliation of Russia, according to the principles they would apply in our case, let them then consider whether they may not humililate and devide us also.

We think the one of these attempts quite as easy as the other. The two interefering powers had a grapple with the Russian bear in 1854, which has taught them to be careful of its grim ling. Muny an army and many a camped till sumise vesterday morning, when we fleet was crushed by this northern Power, in the Crimen, and England alone was, in fact, thoroughly discomfited. Let her try again.
